ITEMS DEBATED

Current Affairs

EU development ministers were updated on the EU response to the latest developments in Afghanistan, Ethiopia and Sudan. Then they discussed the implications of the political situation for EU development assistance.

Next, ministers had an informal exchange of views with the Administrator of the US Agency for International Development (USAID), Samantha Power.

During the informal exchange with USAID Administrator Power, EU ministers addressed the growing immunization gap between developed and developing countries.

Member states supported the idea of having Dr. Chrysoula Zacharopoulou, the EU representative in COVAX and co-chair of the COVAX Facility Shareholders Council, as the focal person to strengthen coordination among EU member states and accelerate efforts, especially in Africa.

Building on the joint commitment to address the climate crisis through infrastructure development confirmed by the EU and the US at the 15 June summit, EU development ministers and USAID Administrator Power discussed the need to identify specific projects for closer cooperation.

Water in external action

The Council then discussed the challenges and opportunities related to water management. The focus of the discussion was on Central Asia, where water scarcity is a geopolitical challenge and the source of instability and migratory pressures.

As a threat multiplier, water must be part of the EU's foreign policy. The EU will act united and in partnership with the regions heavily affected by climate change, such as Central Asia, to address the interconnection between water management, energy and climate change.

The Council also discussed the proposed Team Europe Initiative on water, energy and climate in Central Asia, ahead of the 17th EU-Central Asia ministerial meeting scheduled to take place in Dushanbe (Tajikistan) in June 2022.

Council conclusions

The Council approved conclusions on:

- Water in diplomacy: Council confirms EU's commitment to enhanced EU engagement, press release 19 November 2021
- EU public sector expertise: a key asset at the service of the EU's partner countries
